This strategic plenary will be dedicated to the Habitat III process. Habitat III is the 3rd Conference of the United Nations on Infrastructure and Sustainable Urban Development, scheduled to take place in 2016 and the 4th UCLG Congress in Rabat will be an important step towards this international urban meeting. Habitat III should mark a turning point and a significant phase in the relations between local and regional governments and the UN, with the UN recognising the special status of LRA.

This strategic plenary will additionally address the following questions: what are the essential issues for local and regional governments? How can we guarantee a strong representation of local and regional authorities in the process towards this Conference in view of the 2nd Assembly of Cities and Local and Regional Authorities in 2016? These are only some of the questions that will be addressed during this session.

Sessions: Strategic Plenary II

Chen Jianhua
Mayor of Guangzhou

Mr. Chen Jianhua, was born in March 1956 in Lufeng County of Guangdong Province, China. When China resumed its college entrance examination in 1978, Mayor Chen became one of the first college students, during which he obtained a Bachelor’s degree from Beijing University of Science and Technology and became an engineer. Later on, he obtained a Master degree in administration from the School of Administrative Affairs, Sun Yat-sen University. Mr. Chen has been devoted to local governments and public administration for nearly 30 years. In December 2011, he became Acting Mayor of Guangzhou and took his current post in January 2012.

Chen Jianhua was an eye-witness in Guangdong’s reform and opening up, marked by the southern tour of the late leader Mr. Deng Xiaoping, whose reform conception influenced Mr. Chen so deeply as to bestow him with an innovative vision in administration. He was one of China’s first official leaders to publicize his email address and micro-blog (the Chinese twitter) account. He took the lead in interacting with micro-bloggers to reach to the grass roots and exerted to construct a transparent and trustworthy government. After he became Mayor of Guangzhou, the city became a platform for international cities to exchange on innovative management by hosting the Guangzhou International Urban Innovation Conference and the Guangzhou International Award for Urban Innovation.

Chen Jianhua is a doer. In his political career, he always wards himself from avarice, idleness and emptiness. In his mind, one can’t establish prestige and credibility without incorruptness, just as stated in his public commitment that “once I greed for anything, I’ll be worth nothing”; one can’t make sense without practice, for which he had steeled himself into good health and strong determination within the six years as educated youth in 1970s; and one can’t benefit people without pragmatism, which is perfectly embodied in his hands-on approach, as Mayor of Guangzhou, to actively mobilizing the strength from all walks of life to vigorously promote garbage sorting for the realization of sustainable urban development. Besides, he holds that “the most critical destitution is the destitution of the public right”. Therefore, he earnestly fosters equalization in public service, intensifies assistance for those people in need and enhances urban employment and re-employment so as to secure people’s wellbeing.

Chen Jianhua is a dreamer. He dreams of polishing the glory of Guangzhou as a historical and cultural city and serving as a watcher, constructor and protector of Guangzhou’s historical culture which, for him, becomes more international when more unique. When he served as Director General of Guangzhou Publicity Department, he presided over the construction of large cultural infrastructure such as Guangzhou Opera House, the new Guangdong Museum, the new Guangzhou Library, organized a census of cultural relics in Guangzhou, which was promoted nationwide and labeled as “Guangzhou Experience”, and led the compiling of historically significant works such as Cantonese Opera Dictionary, Collection of Cultural Relics Census in Canton, Historical Records of Canton. Owing to his remarkable contribution to the protection of historical culture, Mr. Chen was presented by the UN with the Outstanding Contribution Award for Asia-Pacific Cultural Heritage Conservation.

Chen Jianhua is married and has one son.
